Looking Back at ACC

The future of ACC will be shaped in part by the experience of the past three decades. This academic conference studies the evolution of ACC through a turbulent period of social, economic, political, and international changes. Five separate panels explore the key policy choices during this period, searching for lessons (including roads not taken) that may help guide ACC in the coming decades.

This symposium brings together New Zealand policy leaders and academic commentators, along with overseas experts. A second symposium exploring future directions for ACC is being planned for 2003.

Planning Committee:

Geoff McLay, Chair

Alan Clayton

Richard Gaskins

Susan St John
